

Ashley Gunterman, Psy.D.

Originally from the Detroit, MI area, Dr. Gunterman relocated to Denver, CO for graduate school at the University of Denver. She earned her doctorate degree in Clinical Psychology from DU in 2015, concentrating in psychological assessment. She then completed her predoctoral psychology internship at Saint Elizabeths Hospital (SEH) in Washington D.C., focusing on psychological assessment and forensic evaluation and treatment. She continued her forensic training at SEH into her postdoctoral residency year until moving back to Colorado where she began practicing as a forensic psychologist in the criminal justice system and for the State of Colorado.

Dr. Gunterman continues to practice as a forensic psychologist, completing court ordered evaluations and serving as the Director of Jail Based Restoration for the Office of Behavioral Health. She joins EIA as a part-time contractor in an effort to return to her roots within psychological assessment and contribute to EIA's mission. She feels at home in Colorado, where you can often find her in the mountains; hiking, camping, kayaking, and relaxing in nature.
